Jingdezhen, China - Celebrate the Millennium of the Porcelain Town

Together with local companies, the government of China is going to invest 60 billion RMB Yuan (equal to about $7.25 billion) to build or restore 20 huge projects. These huge projects include the Ceramic Town of China, the Ceramic Art Center of China, the Imperial Kiln Museum, the Sculpture Garden of World Celebrities, and many traditional residential houses and porcelain-ware studios to attract tourists. All of these programs will be completed in October 2004.

JINGDEZHEN

Located in northeast Jiangxi Province, Jingdezhen is renowned as the "Capital of Porcelain" and has over 1,700 years' ceramic production history. According to historical records, Jingdezhen was named "Xinpingzhen" at first, and changed its name to "Changnanzhen" in the Tang Dynasty. In the Northern Song Dynasty, ceramic productions of the area were admired by the Emperor Jing-de (AD. 1004-1007), and many of the porcelain wares were marked with "Made in Jingdezhen." Then the city was re-named to Jingdezhen, and many emperors set up their imperial kilns there. Jingdezhen is famous for its achievement of unique blue and white porcelain, polychrome decoration, colored enamels, colored glazed ware, etc. The ware reached its blossom during the Ming and Qing Dynasties and was exported to many foreign countries. The characteristics of Jingdezhen porcelain can be described as follows: the whiteness of jade, the thickness of paper, the purity of a mirror, and the sound of a bell. These represent the characteristics of rich Chinese ceramic culture. Nowadays there are over 17,000 private, joint-venture, and state-run ceramic factories in the area.

Sanitation Issue for Traveling in China

The SARS infection is over, the names of the cities were taken off the travel restriction list by the World Health Organization, and daily life got back to normal for all of these people, but there are still some sanitary condition problems in some undeveloped areas in China. Here are some suggestions.

First, NEVER take "the Standard Class" trains in China, which might not have air conditioning, have no private compartments but instead facilities with three berths top to bottom. These trains are usually very crowded and congested. In mainland China there are two classes of tickets available for travelers called "Soft Seats" or "Soft Coach" (first class), and "Standard Seats" or "Standard Coach" (standard or second class). The Soft Coach class is especially designed for foreigners and "decent" people. Most train stations have nice "soft coach waiting rooms" for foreigners. Soft class train travel is safe, clean, and comfortable with air-conditioning. Soft class has four-bunked compartments (two bunks per side), and each car has washing and toilet facilities. You can watch China's diverse countryside speed by, relax, and enjoy your trip. Do not take the Standard or second class trains.

Second, eat in neat restaurants or hotels only, which you can find anywhere in China. NEVER buy cooked food from the street vendors. If you pay attention, you might see what they may do: the bowls, plates, and chopsticks might just be rinsed in a bucket of water that has been re-used many times, they don't really get dining ware washed before serving the next customers. Also, do not drink water from hotel bathroom faucets. You can drink boiled water from a thermos bottle provided in most hotel rooms, or purchase bottles of drinking water, which are readily available.

Be healthy and happy for your China trip!

LETTERS

Letter from NCECA, March 24, 2003

Dear Guangzhen Zhou,
I would like to personally thank you again for your generous donation to the NCECA International Exchange Program. The 2003 Auction was very successful, as we raised over $6000 this year. The NCECA International Exchange Program was established to create a way to return to the membership their donation efforts. In the future we are hoping to expand this program to additional international venues.

ii

Dick Belger made the winning bid in the amount of $150 for your wonderful book that you donated, "The Dictionary of Chinese Ceramics."

Best Wishes,

Some of our new items; such as price labelers, plastic stencil sheets and books that have just arrived, and our web store will be updated by the end of this month at: www.ChineseClayArt.com.

New Books:

BK 009, Awakened, Qin's Terra-Cotta Army , $25.00 Shaanxi Travel & Tourism Press, China, 2001. The book is 126 pages, with over 100 full-color illustrations. The book's contents covers all the information of the history of the first Emperor of China, Qin ShiHuang (Qin Dynasty 211-206 BC), his mausoleum and the Terra-Cotta Army, the discovery and excavation of each pit, newly unearthed relics, and the construction of the Terra-Cotta figures.

BK 010, Invitational Exhibition of International Ceramics, $15.00

A catalog of the Foshan Ceramics Exposition 2002, China, in the Shiwan Ceramics Museum, Guangdong Province. This full-color album of 92 pages, in English and Chinese, includes 48 international artists' works and their biographies.

BK 011, The Traditional Crafts of Porcelain Making in Jingdezhen, $32.00

Written by Bai Ming and published by the Jiangxi Fine Art Publishing House, China, the book is in both Chinese and English, and includes 228 pages, 611 color and 16 black-and white photos, and 37 sketches. This well-illustrated guide contains a brief overview of Jingdezhen and her ceramic history, and the layout of a porcelain studio. It describes the porcelain clay process step-by-step: the traditional techniques of clay wedging, throwing, and trimming; and the painting and decoration techniques of the folk art style, blue-and-white, over-glaze, and under-glaze. It also describes the varied traditional kilns and firing techniques.

BK 012, Ceramic Art of Chun Wen Wang, $80.00

Published by the Wu-Shing Publishing House, Ltd. Taiwan, the book is in full color, with 192 pages, hard cover, and protective case. Over years of extensive testing, Chun Wen Wang has researched the lost glazes called "liquid in liquid-separated glazes" of the Sung Dynasty (1127-1270 A.D.). The glazes include "gold ring," "silver dot," "black pearl," and "fleece." Chun Wen Wang's artworks have been collected and displayed by over 20 art museums around the world, including the Smithsonian, American Art Museum, Los Angeles County Museum of Art, British Museum, and National Historical Museum of Taiwan.
